Reath of Stonewall Jackson. An authentic and deaply interesting account of the mornding and death of the great Consederate chieftain, Stonewell Jackson, is given is the May number of the Bichmond Mediof Journal, written by Dr. Hunter McGuire, who avended him. The bettie of Chancellorsville mes longat or the 2d and 2d of May 1863. it was on the night of the 2d that the dreadful accident (General J. having received his counds at the heads of his own men) occurred, which was the lurning point in the fortunes of the Confederacy. We append the following

"Mrs. Lackson arrived to day, and narsed him faithfully to the end. She was a devoted vife, and earnest Uhristian, and endeared us all to her by her great kindness and gentleness. The Ceneral's joy at the presence of his wife and child was very great, and for him unusually demonstrative. Moticing the sadness of his wife, he said to her senderly, "I know you would gladly give your life for me, but I am perfectly resigned. Do not be sad; I hope I may yet vectors. Pray for me, but always remember in your prayers to use the petition Thy will be done. Hriday his wounds were agrin dressed, and although the quantity of the discharge from there, had diminised, the process of healing was still going on. The pain in his side had disappeared, but he breathed with difficulty and complained of a feeling of great e-haustion When Dr. Breckinridge (who with D. Smith, had been sent for in consultation) sail be hoped that a brister, which had been spolled, would afford him relief, he expressed his own confidence in it, and his final recovery. Dr. Tucker, from Richmond, arrived on Satgrday, and all that he man skill could devise was done, to stay the hand of death. He suf-18.30 no para to-day, the die breathing was less difficult, but he was evidently hourly growing

He was silent for a moment and then said: Is will be infinite gain to be trans-leted to Heaven." He advised his wife in the event of his death, to return to her farther's house, and added, "You have a kind and good farther, but there is no one so kind and good as your Leavenly father." Ee still expressed a hope of his recovery, but requested her if he should die, to have him buried in Lexington, in the Valley of Virginia. His anhaustion increased so rapidly, that at eleven o'clock, Mrs. Jackson knelt by his bed, and told him that before the Sun wend down, he would be with his Seviour. He replied, "Ch, no! you are frightened my child, "death is not so near; I may yet get well." She fell over upon the bed, seeping bitterly, and told him agrice that the Physicians said there was no hops. Lifter a moment's pause, he asked per to call me. Doctor, Auna informs one that you have told her, that I am to die to-day; is it 20?" When he was answered, as turned his eyes towards the ceiling, and gazed for a moment or we as if in intense thought, then replied, av good, very good, it is all sight." Occasional intervals of return of his mind would appear, and during one of them I offered him some brandy and water, but he declined it, saying, "It will only delay my departure, and do no good; I wone to preserve my mind, if possible, to the lest." About arli-past one, he was told that he had but two hours to live, and be ruswered again, feebly, but firely. "Very good, it is all right." A few delirium, "Order A. F.
